

Preface

It is a great challenge to publish a new journal, especially when the journal aims to publish high quality manuscripts. The objective of this special issue is to publish articles pertaining to the various branches of Dentistry. This special issue includes four manuscripts. The success of a Journal depends on the number of highly valued quality manuscripts received. As you read through the articles in this special issue, you would appreciate the quality of the articles published. All the articles are reviewed by the experts in the specialty and modifications were made wherever required, based on expert views before publication.
